MISS MACLAREN

In Her Imitation Roles at The Tabernacle Tonight.

Miss Gay Zenola MacLaren, who will be the Lyceum attraction tonight at the Tabernacle is one of the platform marvels of the age.

A very clear idea of her methods of presenting a play may be gained from the following comment from the Asbury Park Daily press.

"She acts the entire play, portraying each character with such remarkable distinctness as to cause her hearers to mentally witness the play enacted by a full cast, and forget for the moment that they are being entertained by a single artist. It seemed as if she had a large company of players at her call and as if by magic entered, rendered the lines, and exited at her command."

A French critic said of her: "She does not seem to belong to any definite school; she has an inborn talent that belongs to her personally. Her art is so natural she seems to improvise. Although I am unacquainted with the English language, yet to me the characters were living people."

Frankfort, Ky., March 26.—Louisville's country clubs, under a decision handed down by the court of appeals are not entitled to tavern licenses and if the law is obeyed in the future will not be able to provide the liquors necessary to quench the thirst of members and guests.
